

THE LOST KEY

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

John Brown, sexton of Trinity church, was about to go to bed, when, looking at a hook on which the keys of the church were wont to hang, he noticed that the bunch did not look so large as usual. Going to the hook, he took down the keys and found the one to the vestry door missing.

The sexton asked his wife if she had taken the key, and she said she had not. Had it been stolen?

But what object any one could have to steal the vestry door key was a mystery. There was nothing of value to a thief in either the vestry or the church. The plate was not kept there. Hymn and prayer books were in plenty and cushions to the seats, but these were scarcely attractive to a robber.

So reasoning, the sexton went to bed and to sleep, thinking that some one had taken the key for an ordinary purpose and forgotten to put it back in its place. The clock on the church tower was striking 12 when Mrs. Brown awakened her husband.

"There's a light in the church, John," she said.

Brown bestirred himself and, looking out through a window, true enough, saw a dim light, not in the church, but in the vestry. Thinking that, after all, there might be thieves at work, he dressed himself and started for the church. While dressing and on his way he thought what he should do on his arrival and concluded to be guided by circumstances.

On reaching the vestry he stood on tiptoe beside a window and was thus enabled to look inside. The light within was so dim that he could not see very well, but he managed to make out a man and a woman. They were sitting together, and the man was talking earnestly to the woman, who seemed ill at ease.

While John was looking at them he heard a step not far from him, and some one entered the vestry door. As soon as the person was in the vestry John saw that he was a man in the vestments of the Episcopal church. He approached the couple, and John saw that they were talking together, though the two men were talking alternately to the woman, who said nothing. From the manner of all of them it appeared to Brown that they were using persuasion upon the woman. She seemed very young, about twenty years of age. Finally the man who had been sitting with her, rising, took her hand and gently pulled her out of her chair. With evident reluctance she stood beside him, and the man in canonicals began to read from a prayer book.

"This is a marriage," said John to himself, "quite likely a clandestine one. Any way I don't like it that the rector should be beaten out of his fees in this way. I'll happen in and investigate."

So John went to the vestry door and knocked. Not hearing an immediate reply, he opened the door and entered. All three of the persons within stared at him as an intruder, the clergyman turning to do so.

"I'm looking," said John, "for the rector of the church. 'There's a man dyin' and wants him at once.'"

"Am the rector," said the clergyman. "As soon as I have married this couple I'll go with you."

"I thought Dr. Brook was the rector here," said John.

"I am Dr. Brook."

"You Dr. Brook? Not a bit of it. I've heard Dr. Brook preach many a time. I know him well."

"What's that?" said the woman, starting. "Isn't this Dr. Brook?"

"No, miss. Dr. Brook is an older and a larger man than this gentleman."

"Oh, Henry," she exclaimed reproachfully, turning to the man beside her, "you have deceived me!"

"Who are you, and why do you come here at this time of night?" said Henry to the sexton angrily.

"Well, seein' as there's no use in makin' any further pretense, I'm the sexton of this church, and I come here to find out what was goin' on in the vestry. I missed the key and suspected somethin' was wrong. Just now my wife saw a light here, so I tumbled out of bed, and here I am."

At this the woman turned to the man she called Henry and, white with anger, said:

"You villain! You contemptible dog! This explains your story of your parents' objection to your marrying me. This is why you must marry me clandestinely, is it? Don't ever let me see your cowardly face again!"

The man tried to calm her; but, paying no attention to him, she stalked out of the vestry and disappeared in the darkness. Henry made a lunge at the sexton, but the old man was spry enough to get out of the way, and Henry rushed from the vestry, followed by the man in canonicals.

Brown found the missing key in the vestry door, and, looking up, he went home and to bed.

The next morning when he was at work in the church the lady of the evening before entered. The first John knew of her presence he felt her arms about his neck. When the embrace was over she told him her story, which differed but little from such cases. She was a girl without fortune, and the man she was to have married was a rich man's son. The man in canonicals was a fake clergyman. She admitted that John had saved her from a terrible fate, but she was unable to reward him.

However, when the congregation of the church heard of John's good work they made up a handsome purse for him.

Too Full.

A little girl was visiting the sea side for the first time, and her father took her to bathe in the ocean. Nothing more extensive than the bath-tub at home had been her experience.

As she waded out, tightly holding her father's hand, she was presently up to her neck in the water.

"Oh, papa," she exclaimed, "take me out; it's too full!"—Irish World.

CONSTANT HEADACHES

People with thin blood are much more subject to headaches than full-blooded persons and the form of anemia that afflicts growing girls is almost always accompanied by headache together with digestive disturbances and constipation.

Whenever you have constant or recurring headaches and a pallor of the face, show that the blood is thin and your efforts should be directed towards building up your blood. A treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will do this effectively and the rich, red blood will remove the headache.

More disturbances to health are caused by thin blood than you have any idea of. When the blood is impoverished the nerves suffer from lack of nourishment and you may have insomnia, neuritis, neuralgia or sciatica. Muscles subject to strain are undernourished and you may have muscular rheumatism or lumbago. If your blood is thin and you begin to show symptoms of these disorders try building up the blood with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and see if the symptoms do not disappear as the blood is restored to normal.

Get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at the nearest drug store or send fifty cents to the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y. The booklet "Building Up the Blood" is free on request.

AMERICAN WOMAN REBUILDING VILLAGE RUINED BY GERMANS

Mrs. Wm. Crocker of San Francisco Has Taken Vitrimont in Lorraine Under Her Especial Care, Having First Disarmed Suspicion of the Residents.

Vitrimont, near Lunéville, France, Feb. 28.—American sympathy with the civilian sufferers from the war has been given more concrete expression in this little village than in any other part of the devastated country immediately behind the French fighting lines.

When Mrs. William Crocker of San Francisco chose Vitrimont in which to carry out her idea of reconstructing with her own means one of the villages destroyed by the German troops in their first rush into France, she met with much doubt and suspicion. The people of Lorraine are practical and hard-headed, and also object to partaking of anything given in the form of charity. It was, therefore, necessary to make the proposition a purely business-like one before laying it before the villagers. All the men of fighting age are at the front with their regiments. One of the villagers while in the trenches one day received from his wife a letter giving details of reconstruction. He immediately replied: "Don't waste ink in telling me fairy tales. You are ready to swallow any yarn told you. Just make up your mind as I have done that we have lost everything, and don't dream that good fairies are going to restore all to us."

In order to convince this man and many of his village neighbors serving in the same corps that somebody was really taking interest in them and they would not merely have to be content with the government indemnity of 40 per cent. of their losses, Miss Daisy Polk, also a Californian and now administrator of the plan, gave printed plans and details of the scheme to the wives left behind. These were forwarded at once to the men at the front, who could be assured only by documentary evidence of this kind of the good fortune to be conferred on them and their dependents.

Miss Polk, who since the beginning of the war has been occupied in relief work of various kinds, was chosen by Mrs. Crocker to administer her benevolent scheme. She decided at once to live among the people so as to become better acquainted with them and to learn their needs. Every house, without exception, had been either shelled or burnt. She, however, was able to find a one-roomed cottage which could be repaired, and here from her single room Miss Polk directs all the work. She interviews there the architect, the builders, the departmental officials and government functionaries, and only recently received Ambassador William G. Sharp, who had come to lay the cornerstone of the first new house.

Of the 70 houses composing the village, 34 were shelled and the remaining 36 burned. The government itself decided to repair the bombarded houses, which were not so badly damaged as those which had been set afire. The reconstruction of these latter was undertaken by Mrs. Crocker.

No attempt was made by the authors of the scheme to force American ideas down the throats of the conservative Lorrainers. Very little change had taken place in the village since the 15th century, and the style of architecture was very uniform, usually taking the shape of one or two-story cottages, with grange door entrances and attached at the back the granaries and cattle sheds. The only changes insisted on by the promoters of the scheme, as well as by the French government, were the introduction of sanitary arrangements, which hitherto had been non-existent, the provision of ventilation in the rooms and the separation by an intervening courtyard of the cattle sheds and the human habitations.

It was with difficulty that the peasants could be induced to accept some of these changes, but at length reason prevailed and the plans were finally drawn up.

The new village is to have wider streets and the main road through it is to be planted with trees, while the town hall and school are now to occupy prominent and spacious positions in the center of the village, instead of being hidden as before the war in narrow lanes without any air space.

HOW TO BE RID OF CHRONIC DANDRUFF

Faded, dull or lifeless hair is quickly restored to beauty by this simple treatment, which is absolutely harmless.

Parisian Sage can be obtained from the Red Cross Pharmacy and druggists everywhere. It is not expensive.—Adv.

DRYS GIVE WARNING

Will Retaliate if Postal Bill Is Killed by Congress

TO BREAK BACK OF LIQUOR TRADE

And Statutory Prohibition Would Be Weapon Used

Washington, Feb. 28.—Threats by liquor leader in Congress to kill the entire postal appropriation bill because of its anti-liquor advertising provision, resulted in the formal announcement yesterday by the board of temperance of the Methodist Episcopal church, that, if necessary, it would see to it that every voter in the districts of the men responsible for the defeat of the bill was informed of "this representative's dishonor." "What is more," said Rev. Clarence True Wilson, D. D., general secretary of the board, "if the postal bill dies, the next Congress will witness a vigorous fight, from the very first day it convenes, for statutory prohibition throughout the nation. If we get a square deal we will wait, for prohibition by the route of the constitution, but if not, we will break the back of the liquor trade first and get a constitutional amendment afterwards. There is absolutely no ground for the assumption that statutory prohibition would not stand in the courts."

MAY YET KILL DRY BILL.

Prohibition Leaders in Congress Alarmed by Rumor.

Washington, Feb. 28.—Prohibition leaders in Congress were in arms Monday night over a report that the conferees on the postoffice appropriation bill were preparing to let the measure fall in order to kill the Reed "bone dry" amendment prohibiting the shipment of liquor into dry states. Representative Randall of California declared he had definite information that such a course had been planned. He and other prohibition champions said if the conferees reported a disagreement, and a resolution continuing the present postoffice appropriations were brought in they would see to it that the Reed amendment went to the White House with the continuing resolution.

DIVORCE CASE STIRS BOSTON'S BACK BAY

Albert E. Pillsbury Seeks a Separation from His Wife.

Boston, Feb. 28.—A stir was caused in society and political circles yesterday when it leaked out that Albert E. Pillsbury, former attorney-general, had brought suit for divorce against Mrs. Elizabeth Pillsbury, his second wife, who is more than thirty years his junior.

Mrs. Pillsbury, one of the most popular of the younger matrons in Back Bay society, has filed a cross bill, charging the former attorney-general with cruel and abusive treatment.

Mr. Pillsbury names John E. McCanna, a real estate broker, as correspondent. McCanna is the husband of Marion St. Clair Whittemore, the Wellesley college graduate of Chestnut hill, who eloped with James V. Dignowity, son of a multi-millionaire miner of Philadelphia, from whom she was divorced in 1910. He has since married Grace Newell Strong, daughter of Dr. George W. Strong of New York.

McCanna is said to have become acquainted with Mrs. Pillsbury at the Brookline Country club and she is alleged by her husband to have entertained McCanna at her home.

Mr. Pillsbury is 68 years of age, and his wife is 37. He was 61 when his first child by his second wife was born.

An interesting illusion. A curious and interesting effect may be produced in the following simple manner:

Take a sheet of paper or thin cardboard about five inches square and roll it into a tube, with one end just large enough to fit around the eye and the other end somewhat smaller. Hold the tube between the thumb and first finger of the right hand—do not grasp the tube with the whole hand—and place the larger end of the tube close against the right eye. With the left hand place a book against the side of the tube. If both eyes are now kept open there will appear to be a hole through the book, and it will appear that objects are seen through this hole and not through the tube. The effect is even more odd if the left hand instead of a book is held against the tube, when the hole will appear through the center of the hand.

Tombstone to a Fish.

In the little village of Blockley, in South Worcestershire, stands a picturesque little dwelling named Fish Cottage. Enter its garden and you will find what is probably the only tombstone ever erected to the memory of a fish. The inscription, with its quaint punctuation, reads as follows:

IN MEMORY OF THE OLD FISH.
(Under the soil, the old fish, do, lie.
Twenty years, he lived and then, did, die.
He was so tame, you understand
He would, come and eat, out, of, our hand.
Died April the 25th, 1883.
Aged 20 years.

White men should exhibit the same insensibility to moral tortures that red men do to physical tortures.—Theophile Gautier.

WOMAN COULD HARDLY STAND

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Fulton, N. Y.—"Why will women pay out their money for treatment and receive no benefit, when so many have proved that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will make them well? For over a year I suffered so from female weakness I could hardly stand and was afraid to go on the street alone. Doctors said medicines were useless and only an operation would help me, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved it otherwise. I am now perfectly well and can do any kind of work."—Mrs. NELLIE PHELPS, care of R. A. Rider, R.F.D. No. 5, Fulton, N. Y.

We wish every woman who suffers from female troubles, nervousness, backache or the blues could see the letters written by women made well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. If you have had symptoms and do not understand the cause, write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for helpful advice given free.

Several hundred women marched in a parade of 1,100 residents of West Manchester, N. H., Saturday to present a demand to the mayor for another bridge across the Merrimack river. The demand for the bridge was made by a committee headed by two factory girls, representing the large number of this class who are obliged to walk three miles extra to and from their work because of inadequate bridge facilities. The mayor addressed the crowd, but put the responsibility up to the legislature and said he could do nothing.

Making Sandwiches. Each season brings its new crop of varied sandwich fillings, and it is a good idea to jot down as one hears about them and then after a trial specialize on those that are found to be the best. Remember that in sandwich making the bread is better when it is a day old and that butter should be softened with a little whipped cream and warm enough to spread on the slices without breaking them. Brown bread, whole wheat and raisin loaves make a variety in themselves, while the rye is always good with the cheese mixtures.

Sandwiches keep much better if they are wrapped before putting into the hamper in linen cloths that have been wrung out in cold water. Cutting them in fancy shapes is hardly advisable, as they do not pack so well, and if they are left square and the crusts cut off they are just as dainty for the outdoor appetite.

Care of the Teeth. "What a beautiful woman!" exclaimed a man at a popular play the other evening, referring to a particularly pretty girl who held the centre of the stage.

LADIES! SECRET TO DARKEN GRAY HAIR

Bring Back Its Color and Luster with Grandma's Sage Tea Recipe

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the sage tea and sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, costing about 50 cents a large bottle, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of trouble.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, soft, and luxuriant, and you appear years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.—Adv.
